New Book Acquisition

The latest addition to our collection of illustrated law books is Francesco Degli Allegri’s Tractato nobilissima della prudentia et iustitia (Venice, 1508), the only copy in a North American library.

Lynda.com's Online Training Library

Law students have access to Lynda.com's online training library. The online training library offers access to training sessions in streaming video covering a variety of software products and digital technologies.

There are courses in software programs like the Microsoft Office and Adobe suites, instruction in programming languages, and even communication and business skills.

In addition students can search for specific skills such as “table of authorities” or “redact” to locate specific tasks or skills that are covered in a course.

Lynda.com is available at http://www.lynda.com/portal/yale and requires access to the Yale network and CAS authentication.
